PROSECCO

Prosecco in a beautiful bottle is a sparkling wine made from Glera grapes previously also known as Prosecco. It is produced by the Charmat method (secondary fermentation takes place in stainless steel tanks). It is grown mostly in the northern region called Veneto close to Conegliano and Valdobbiadene on the hills north of Treviso.

The name comes from northern Italian village called Prosecco. The alcohol content is 11–12 %. The taste is mostly fruity, intensive aroma and freshness that evokes flavours of yellow apple, pear, white peach, apricot or citrus fruit (such as lemon and grapefruit) with hints of honey. Unlike champagne, which is popular for its rich flavour and complex secondary aroma majority of Prosecco has an intensive primary aroma. Prosecco is light, fresh and simple.

Prosecco is suitable for every occasion, ideally as an aperitif or in combination with pasta with white sauce, fish and seafood dishes or summer salad.
